About the Workshop:

This Workshop is an annual series starting in 1998 to provide a forum for discussing all the important issues in computational condensed matter physics and materials science. The principal purpose of the Workshop is to offer an opportunity for exchanging ideas and enjoying in-depth discussion both in the methodology in computational physics and chemistry and its application to a wide variety of materials having not only fundamental significance and but also industrial importance. The Workshop consists of plenary talks, invited talks, and contributed poster presentations. The majority of the participants are active scientists and researchers in electronic structure theory from all Asian countries.
